WHY DON'T YOU CLEAN UP?

The following letter has been sent to dwellers on the river bank by the Civics committee. It might be well to pass some attention to it.

To Occupants of River Bank Properties.

Citizens living in all quarters of town have urged the Civic committee of the City Federation of Women's Clubs to make a complaint to the city authorities of those persons violating the city ordinance by dumping debris on the river bank.

The committee realizing the inadequacy of the garbage system is reluctant to resort to such drastic measures before calling attention to the ordinance, and seeking co-operation in the effort to rid the city of one of its worse nuisances.

The committee recognizes the fact that the ice will soon carry away the winter accumulation, and begs that thereafter the ordinance be observed.

The committee will be grateful for your opinion as to the advisability of having the garbage removed daily from the business section, and also how to keep the loose papers from littering the streets.

Respectfully,

The Civics Committee.

Following is the ordinance:

ORDINANCE NO. 115.

Section 1. It is hereby declared unlawful for any person or persons, corporation or corporations, to dump, unload, throw or deposit any rubbish, debris, waste material or garbage of any kind or description along or upon either bank of the Wisconsin River at any point within the corporate limits of said city.

Section 2. Any person or persons, corporation or corporations, who shall violate the provisions of Section One of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine of not less than $2.00 and not more than $25.00 and cost of prosecution; and upon failure to pay said fine and costs, shall be committed to the county jail of Wood County not less than five days nor more than twenty days.

The Elks Minstrel Show.

The Elks of Grand Rapids Lodge are to give a big minstrel show on March 30th and 31st. There are about thirty of our young men and business men taking part and they have been rehearsing for the past six weeks under the direction of Arthur P. Mulroy who has directed several shows of this kind in Chicago and vicinity.

We are told that the boys are displaying a wonderful amount of talent and by the last of this month will be able to produce one of the best home talent shows ever witnessed in this part of the country.

The first part will consist of the full chorus or circle, introducing several soloists, quartets and choruses and several gags by the end men, while the second part will be made up of a number of specialties and a side splitting one act farce entitled "The Hotel Halfback." Connelly prepares throughout the entire show so when you come be prepared for a good laugh. Remember the dates are Wednesday and Thursday evenings, March 30th and 31st.

JOHN JACOB ASTOR

The First

by Elbert Hubbard

Copyright by Elbert Hubbard Publishing Company

JON JACOB ASTOR was born of a Dutch family that had migrated down to Heidelberg from Antwerp. Through some strange freak of destiny the father of the boy lived back and was more or less of a stone age cave dweller. He was a butcher by trade in the little town of Waldorf, a few miles from Heidelberg. A butcher's knife then was to travel around and kill the pig or sheep or cow that the tender-hearted owners dare not harm. The butcher was a pariah, a sort of unofficial industrial hangman.

Jacob Astor was the youngest of four sons and as many daughters. The brothers ran away early in life and went to sea or joined the army. One of these boys came to America and followed his father's trade of butcher.

Jacob Astor, the happy father of John Jacob, used to take the boy with him on his skinning expeditions. This for two reasons, one, so the lad would learn a trade, and the other to make sure that the boy did not run away.

The pastor of the local Lutheran church took pity on this boy, who had such disgust for his father's trade, and hired him to work in his gardens and run errands.

Under the kindly care of the village parson John Jacob grew in mind and body. His estate was to come later. When he was 17 his father came to the parsonage and made a formal demand for his services. The young man made up his father's work of butchering. That night John Jacob walked out of Waldorf by the wan light of the moon, headed for Antwerp. He carried a big red handkerchief, in which his worldly goods were knotted.

He reached Antwerp in a week. There he got a job on the docks as a laborer. The captain of a ship asked him to go to London and figure up the manifests on the way, it went.

The captain of the ship recommended him to the company in London and the boy was piling up wealth at the rate of a guinea a month.

In September, 1782, came the news to London that George Washington had surrendered. In any event peace had been declared—Gorawall had forced the issue, so the Americans had stopped fighting.

A little later it was given out that England had given up her American colonies and they were free.

Intuitively John Jacob Astor felt that the "new world" was the place for him. He bought passage by a sailing ship bound for New York, at a cost of five pounds. He then fastened five pounds in a belt around his waist and with the rest of his money—after sending two pounds to his father, with a letter of love—bought a dozen German flutes.

He had learned to play on this instrument with proficiency and in America he thought there would be an opening for musicians and musical instruments.

John Jacob was then nearly 20 years of age.

On board ship he met a German, 20 years older than himself, who was a fur trader and had been home on a visit. John Jacob played the flute and the German friend told stories of fur trading among the Indians.

Young Astor's curiosity was excited. The Waldorf-Astoria plan of flute playing was forgotten. He fed on fur trading.

Arriving in Baltimore, he was disappointed to learn that there were no fur traders there. He started for New York.

There he found work with a certain Robert Bowne, a Quaker who bought and sold furs.

Young Astor set himself to learn the business—every part of it. He was always sitting on the doorstep before the owner, carrying a big key to open the warehouse, got around in the morning. He was the last to leave at night.

The qualities that make a youth a good servant are the basic ones for mastership. Astor's alertness, willingness, loyalty and ability to obey delivered his employer over into his hands.

Robert Bowne, the good old Quaker, insisted that Jacob should eat him, Robert, and from boarding the young man with a nearby war widow who took cheap boarders, Bowne took young Astor to his own house and raised his pay from $2 a week to $6.

Bowne had made an annual trip to Montreal for many years. Montreal was the metropolis for furs. Bowne went to Montreal himself because he did not know of anyone he could trust to carry the message to Garcia.

Young Astor had been with Bowne only a year. He spoke imperfect English, but he did not drink or gamble and he knew furs and was honest.

Bowne started him off for Canada with a belt full of gold; his only weapon was a German dute that he carried in his hand.

John Jacob Astor ascended the Hudson river to Albany and then with pack on his back struck north alone, through the forest for Lake Champlain. As he approached an Indian settlement he played his flute. The aborigines showed no disposition to give him the hook. He hired Indians to paddle him up to the Canadian border. He reached Montreal.

The fur traders there knew Bowne as a very sharp buyer and so had their quilts out on his approach. But young Astor was seemingly indifferent. His manner was courteous and easy. He got close to his man and took his pick of the pelts at fair prices. He expended all of his money and even bought on credit, for there are men who always have credit.

Young Astor found Indian nature to be simply human nature. The savage was a man and courtesy, gentleness and fairly good flute playing soothed his savage breast. Astor had beads and blankets, a flute and a smile. The Indians carried his goods by relays and then passed him on with cultural certificates as to character to other red men and at last he reached New York without the loss of a pelt or the dampening of his ardor.

Bowne was delighted. To young Astor it was nothing. He had in his blood the success corpse.

He might have remained with Bowne and become a partner in the business, but Bowne had business limits.

SKY PILOT OF THE LAKES

Rev. W. H. Law's Parish is 1800 Miles Long and 300 Wide, and its Membership Large.

A parish 1800 miles in length and 300 miles in width is in charge of Rev. W. H. Law, known from Buffalo to Duluth as the sky pilot of the great lakes.

The membership of this parish runs into the thousands, and the great ma-

One of the Few.
"De man, dit's his own worst enemy," said Oscar Eliot, "is one o' de few people dat makes any real progress toward lovin' de enemies."

Belief in That Country That Females Have No Souls Leads to Cruel Treatment.

An Englishwoman, Mrs. Benn, has, like so many other English folks whose one wish seems to be that "foreign countries they should go see," been traveling about Persia, which she does not seem to fancy greatly, and the people and their customs lea-

Beside carrying the message of the Gospel to these men he takes to them books, magazines, papers and news of the outside world.

His visits are looked forward to by the lighthouse keepers and the lightship crews, for his territory is so large that he is unable to visit them more than once during the season.

He maintains a small circulating library of not more than 70 books. He also carries with him a phonograph with records of the most popular hymns.

Some of the lighthouses visited are far from the mainland and the trips to them are hazardous. Standard rock light for instance, is nearly 50 miles out from Marquette, on Lake Superior. It is erected on a small but dangerous reef which resembles whale's back.

The light is 105 feet in height, and rests on crib work, which is encircled by a railway, and for weeks at a time the weather is so bad that it is dangerous for the keepers to venture out.

The day of jewels and silks lasts, and afterward as age comes on, drop back into drudges, caring for their successors' children, and content if they are not beaten.

In Persia, as in most eastern countries, there are great numbers of people with sore eyes, owing largely to the glare and dust and dirt, and Mrs. Benn, being presumably a woman with ideas on hygiene, thinks yet more of the "multitudes of flies which swarm over all food and the faces of the children without disturbing the Persians." She does not count the cost so far as the future is concerned: but scarcely less a fool is he who does not overlook past costs. If we have any good or delightful thing in this life, at all hazards let us not taint our enjoyment by considering what we gave for it.

Was it more than we could afford? Never mind, we have afforded it, we have made our purchase. Let us take the ticket with the price and burn the receipt. There are items in life's ledger which must be overlooked unless we would spend all our days in balancing closed accounts.

NOTHING NEW IN IDEA OF ALDRICH

Inquiries Similar to One He Asks Have Been Made Before.

BROUGHT FORTH NO RESULTS

Reports Concerning Economy Generally Pigeonholed—President Taft Not Worrying Over Roosevelt's Return—Interest Over Investment.

Washington—Senator Aldrich's bill to create a "government business method commission" is a measure somewhat similar to others that have been introduced in the past in Congress. There have been inquiries at sometime into the business methods of the departments with a view to discovering ways and means to save money, but the reports which were turned in were pre-empted as a rule, if action was taken. It had no immediate result in reducing expenses.

Years ago the term "million dollar congress" was used merely for the purpose of getting the effect which sometimes comes from a picture-speech exaggeration. No one dreamed 20 years ago that at any one session of Congress there would be appropriated for the expenses of the government as much of money reaching anywhere near the billion mark. Last year, however, Congress appropriated $1,640,000,000, and this year it will appropriate in all human probability about the same amount.

The government work constantly is expanding. As the people grow, their expenses grow, and therefore, if in 1810, the appropriation bills are just the same as they were in 1899, it is of necessity market saving, after all. The fact that there is not likely to be any growth in the appropriations this year over that of last year is due largely to the pruning methods which have been adopted in the committee of Congress which scrutinizes the supply bills.

Clever Political Work.

It is regarded in Washington as a bold, and it may be a successful party stroke for the leader of the Republican party in the Senate to come out as he has for a reduction of the expenditures of the government. The Republican party has been charged with extravagance. The Democrats say that even if Mr. Aldrich's bill becomes a law, the business men's commission that out red money can be saved, and money finally is saved, this will be readily understood why it is that the colony's friends do not think that he will become hardly an adverse critic of the man in whom for so long a time he had placed his confidence. It may be that Col. Roosevelt is disappointed because his party already has not carried out every pledge that was made in the national platform. It may possibly be that he is disappointed by President Taft, but even if this is so his friends in Washington say he is going to keep his own counsel for a long time yet to come.

Investigations Interest.

The interest in Washington actually seems to be sharper to day in the investigations under congressional supervision which are going on, than in any legislation which is pending before the lawmakers.

The Democrats say that the Republicans are busy investigating themselves, but nonpartisan fairness would make it appear that the Democrats are right only in part.

Here is a list of the investigations and inquiries, for inquiry is better word to apply in some cases, which are now under way or in present prospect:

Relating to the official conduct of Richard A. Ballinger, Secretary of the Interior and Gifford Pinchot, former United States forester.

To the cost of living.

An Inquiry into the business methods of the various departments of the government with the view of discovering, if possible, why it costs so much to run the federal machine.

Employees in Protest.

Any scheme for the investigation of the departments with a view to cutting down expenditures is bound to be met with opposition from the great force of government employees, some 30,000 in number, who are on the labor rolls in Washington. A great many of these small officials, clerks, messengers, stenographers, doorkeepers and laborers have families dependent upon them and with their families they make up a large percentage of the population of the capital city. If economy means a cutting down of salaries or a dismissal of a part of the working force employed, the reason for the opposition of the clerks and others is plain.

Astor lost a million dollars by the venture. He smiled calmly and said, "The plan was right, but my men were weak; that is all. The gateway to China will be from the northwest. My plans were right. Time will vindicate my reasoning."

When the block on Broadway bounded by Vesey and Barclay streets was cleared of its plain two-story houses, preparatory to building the Astor house, wise men shook their heads and said, "It's too far up town."

But the free bus that met all boats solved the difficulty and gave the cue to hotel men all over the world.

It seems, however, that Roger Morris had only a life interest in the estate, and this was a legal point so fine that it was entirely overlooked in the joy of confiscation.

John Jacob Astor accidentally ascertained the facts. He was convinced that the heirs could not be robbed of their rights through the acts of a leaseholder, which legally was the status of Roger Morris. Astor was a good real estate lawyer himself, but he referred the point to the best counsel he could find. They agreed with him. He next hunted up the heirs and bought their quietus for $100,000.

He then notified the parties who had purchased the land and they in turn made claim upon the state for protection.

After much legal parleying the case was tried according to stipulation, with the state of New York as defendant and Astor and the occupants as plaintiffs.

It seems, however, that Roger Morris had only a life interest in the estate, and this was a legal point so fine that it was entirely overlooked in the joy of confiscation.

John Jacob Astor accidentally ascertained the facts. He was convinced that the heirs could not be robbed of their rights through the acts of a leaseholder, which legally was the status of Roger Morris. Astor was a good real estate lawyer himself, but he referred the point to the best counsel he could find. They agreed with him. He next hunted up the heirs and bought their quietus for $100,000.

He then notified the parties who had purchased the land and they in turn made claim upon the state for protection.

In all of his dealings he was uniquely honorable and upright. He paid and he made others pay. His word was his bond. He was not charitable in the sense of indiscriminate giving. "To give something for nothing is to weaken the giver," was one of his favorite sayings. That this attitude protected a mislaid spirit it is easy to say, but it is not wholly true. In his later years he carried with him a book containing a record of his possessions. He would visit a certain piece of property and then turn to his book and see what it had cost him ten or twenty years before. To realize that his prophetic vision had been correct was to him a great source of satisfaction.

His habits were of the best. He went to bed at nine o'clock and was up before six. At seven he was at his office. He knew enough to eat sparingly and to walk, so he was never sick. Millionaires, as a rule, are woefully ignorant. Up to a certain sum, they grow with their acquisitions. Then they begin to wither at the heart. The care of a fortune is a penalty. I advise the gentle reader to think twice before accumulating ten millions.

John Jacob Astor was exceptional in his combined love of money and love of books. Fitz-Green Lyle was his private secretary, hired on a basis of literary friendship. Washington Irving was a close friend, too.

Astor died, aged 86. It was a natural death—a thing that very seldom occurs. The machinery all ran down at once.

William B. Astor, the son of John Jacob, was brought up in the financial way he should go. He was studious, methodical, conservative, and had the good sense to carry out the wishes of his father. His son, John Jacob Astor, was very much like him, only of more neutral tint. The time is now ripe for another genius in the Astor family. If William B. Astor lacked the courage and initiative of his parent, he had more culture and spoke English without an accent. The son of John Jacob Astor, second, is William Waldorf Astor, who speaks English with an English accent, you know.

John Jacob Astor, besides having the first store for the sale of musical instruments in America, organized the first orchestra of over 12 players. He brought over a leader from Germany and did much to foster the love of music in the New World.

It always has been said that there could be a great saving in government expenditures if absolute business methods were applied, and it is very probable that this is true. If there is a chance to save three hundred millions, perhaps the expenditure of the few thousands that a committee of inquiry will cost will not be unwise.

President Not Worrying.

There is no evidence that President Taft is worrying in the least about what Col. Theodore Roosevelt may say concerning the progress or the lack of progress of the policies of the present administration. It is apparent that the president holds to the belief that Mr. Roosevelt will believe in his absolute sincerity of purpose, and that even though Congress does not put through all the advanced legislation which the president has recommended, Mr. Roosevelt will realize that the fault is that of Congress and not the administration.

It is curious from how many viewpoints the return of the strenuous one to this country is looked at. There are those advanced Republicans who are so progressive that their fellow party members call them radical, who are somewhat costly.

An alarm of fire was sounded at about six o'clock Friday afternoon and it was learned that the home of Cashier Crowley was ablaze. WHAT IS HAIZING?

A bill has been framed in the senate committee on military affairs prescribing regulations that shall govern the disposal of West Point ended for the practice of "haizing," and defining in explicit language what is meant by the term itself. It seems that the dictatorial definitions have not proved satisfactory either to the senate committee or to the executive heads of the war department, and in lieu of a satisfactory translation of the comprehensive term it becomes necessary for the law givers to frame one for themselves. It is in many cases easier to offer an example than a synonym, says Philadelphia Ledger. Anyone knows "haizing" who he sees it, and every thoughtful person deplores the brutal disregard of another's feelings that is involved in the reprehensible practice. No definition would be complete that failed to take into consideration the fact that mental anguish is sometimes much more painful than physical suffering. A mark of high mind may be haized not less effectively than the body. In order to "haize" successfully it is not necessary to use instruments of torture. Some of the most brutal instances of haizing on record have been those in which the imagination of the chosen victim has been ingeniously assailed by the hard-harrowing dread of things that did not happen.

The figures showing the gold production of the world for 1909, while not complete, prove that the great output of recent years has been kept up. The actual production during 1908 was $43,131,537. The estimated total for 1909, based on official returns from the leading countries for 11 months, is $47,597,280, an increase of $4,162,755, or 9.2 per cent., over the preceding twelve-months. The trimming in South Africa leads off, with $15,196,000, followed by $15,819,016 in 1908. The United States ranks second with $9,559,000 against $9,159,000. With one or two exceptions every country in the list produced more gold last year than in 1908. Further comparison shows that the gain has been in an almost unbroken ratio during the last 20 years, for which period there has been a fourfold gain in the world's supply. The figures have economic significance and study of them may serve to explain some of the changes that are being wrought in the world's monetary system.

The meanness of the short measure tried is conspicuously exemplified in the report that consumers in New York city alone are annually cheated out of 1,100,000 quarts of milk for which they pay and, according to recent evidence, pay exorbitantly but which they do not receive because the bottles in which the milk is delivered are under full size. The milk sold in this manner goes for the most part to poor persons and furnishes a large proportion of the sustenance of children. Short measure in this instance therefore means robbing those whose lot is already hard enough and who have to pay heavily for every necessity of life. If there is not a method of reaching the conscientious persons who perpetrate such despicable frauds certainly the law should remedy the defect.

A Russian bank has been started at Buenos Ayres, the capital of Argentina, and a line of steamships from St. Petersburg to South America is projected, owing to the large and increasing trade of Russia with that country. All the other leading European nations have an important commerce with South America, which is pushed with all the energy possible and with the application of every practicable method, including subsidized steamers, bilateral exchange arrangements, and the maintenance of well-stocked agencies in South America, with employees carefully trained for their duties, and with strict regard for South American tastes and desires in the character and quality of goods.

Even in this rushing age you can't blame a man for standing still when he is in the storm center of such formidable elements as a street car, a whirl of automobiles, a part of the flying squadron of motorcycles, trucks, carriages, bicycles and express wagons. Then to be ordered to move on by a big policeman with a studded club, the shouting being of lead assaying better than 90 per cent., excuses thought confusion.

A winter sometimes makes as much as $100 a week in tips. Assume that your man is one of that kind and tip him the remark that you really haven't anything worth his notice.

Mind your own business is a good motto, as a general thing; but an off-shielder is expected to mind the people's business and not his own.

TAFT LETTERS READ

50 KILLED BY AVALANCHES

TWO IDAHO TOWNS ARE CRUSHED BY SNOWSLIDES.

CLASH BETWEEN SECRETARY WILSON AND PINCHOT IN BALLINGER HEARING.

DOLIVER LETTER IS CAUSE Head of Agricultural Department on Witness Stand Declares He Never Gave Iowa Senator Permission to Write Misive.

Washington. There was a dramatic clash between Secretary Wilson and Gifford Pinchot before the Ballinger investigation committee Tuesday.

Mr. Pinchot asserted he received

Secretary Wilson's permission to write to Senator Doliver, Secretary

Wilson, taking the stand, declared with great emphasis he never did and never would have consented to the writing of such a letter. He never had the letter or heard of it until read in the senate.

In reading his testimony before the investigating committee, Mr. Pinchot read a letter from President Taft, dated November 24, 1909, replying to the witness' letter of November 4.

Mr. Taft said he could not concur with Mr. Pinchot's views as to Mr.

Ballinger and declared that the fact that Mr. Ballinger differed with some of the things Mr. Garfield had done, did not argue a lack of friendliness on the part of Mr. Ballinger toward the cause of conservation.

The president also declared that Mr. Pinchot's statement had not shaken his confidence in the good faith of Secretary

Ballinger and his hearty interest in the cause of conservation.

Asked as to what impression the letter of the president had upon him, Mr. Pinchot said the impression was deep.

"Clayton had been charged on the ground that he charged against Mr.

Ballinger were baseless," he said,

"when we now know they were far from baseless."

The witness proceeded to describe his thoughts following these events and it became evident that he was leading up to the circumstances of the writing of the letter to Senator Doliver, after which President Taft demanded Mr. Pinchot's resignation.

"I have a letter from Secretary Wilson asking me to present my testimony to you," said Chairman Nelson.

"A message was sent requesting the immediate presence of Mr. Wilson.

When Secretary Wilson arrived he took a seat beside Chairman Nelson.

Mr. Pinchot then read into evidence his letter to Senator Doliver.

Mr. Pinchot was asked to explain his statement in the letter that President Taft had been indicted.

He declared that evidence before the committee showed Mr. Ballinger knew more about the Cunningham claims than any other man in the service and proceeded to recite the various facts that have come out at the hearing.

Mr. Pinchot declared he thought the president had been induced because in his letter of September 13 discrediting

the Givins charges he made no reference to Mr. Ballinger's action in discrediting the Cunningham claims or that Love himself did not regard an anything like action.

"If a subordinate of mine had taken the action Mr. Ballinger took," decided the witness dramatically, "I would have dismissed him either for corruption or incapacity and I haven't had care which but the request was met with refusal."

WHAT IS HAZING?

A bill has been framed in the senate committee on military affairs prescribing regulations that shall govern the dismissal of West Point cadets for the practice of "hazing," and defining in explicit language what is meant by the term itself. It seems that the dictatorial definitions have not proved satisfactory either to the senate committee or to the executive heads of the war department, and in lieu of a satisfactory translation of the comprehensive term it becomes necessary for the law givers to frame one for themselves. It is in many cases easier to offer an example than a synonym, says Philadelphia Ledger. Anyone knows "hazing" when he sees it, and every thoughtful person deplores the brutal disregard of another's feelings that is involved in the reprehensible practice. No definition would be complete that failed to take into consideration the fact that mental anguish is sometimes much more painful than physical sufferings. A man's—or a boy's—mind may be hazed not less effectually than his body, in order to "haze" successfully. It is not necessary to use instruments of torture. Some of the most brutal instances of hazing on record have been those in which the imagination of the chosen victim has been ingeniously assailed by the soul-harrowing dread of things that did not happen.

The figures showing the gold production of the world for 1909, while not complete, prove that the great output of recent years has been kept up. The actual production during 1908 was $143,424,527. The estimated total for 1909, based on official returns from the leading countries for 11 months, is $167,567,280, an increase of $14,122,753, or 3.2 per cent, over the preceding two-months. The Transvaal in South Africa leads off, with $151,300,000 against $105,819,016 in 1908. The United States ranks second with $96,000,000 against $94,550,000. With one or two exceptions every country in the list produced more gold last year than in 1908. Further comparison shows that the ratio has been in an almost unbroken ratio during the last 20 years, for which period there has been a fourfold gain in the world's supply. The figures have economic significance and study of them may serve to explain some of the changes that are being wrought in the world's monetary system.

The meanness of the short-measure trick is conspicuously exemplified in the report that consumers in New York city alone are annually cheated out of 14,000,000 quarts of milk for which they pay—and, according to recent evidence, pay exorbitantly—but which they do not receive because the bottles in which the milk is delivered are under full size. The milk sold in this manner goes for the most part to poor persons and furnishes a large proportion of the sustenance of children. Short measure in this instance therefore means robbing those whose lot is already hard enough and who have to pay heavily for every necessary of life. If there is not a method of reaching the conscienceless persons who perpetrate such despicable frauds certainly the law should remedy the defect.

TAFT LETTERS READ

50 KILLED BY AVALANCHES

CLASH BETWEEN SECRETARY WILSON AND PINCHOT IN BALLINGER HEARING.

DOLLIVER LETTER IS CAUSE

Head of Agricultural Department on Witness Stand Declares He Never Gave Iowa Senator Permission to Write Missive.

Washington.—There was a dramatic clash between Secretary Wilson and Gifford Pinchot before the Ballinger investigation committee Tuesday.

Mr. Pinchot asserted he secured Secretary Wilson's permission to write to Senator Dolliver. Secretary Wilson, taking the stand, declared with great emphasis he never did and never would have consented to the writing of such a letter. He never saw the letter or heard of it until read in the senate.

Resuming his testimony before the investigating committee, Mr. Pinchot read a letter from President Taft, dated November 24, 1909, replying to the witness' letter of November 4. Mr. Taft said he could not coincide with Mr. Pinchot's views as to Mr. Ballinger and declared that the fact that Mr. Ballinger differed with some of the things Mr. Garfield had done, did not argue a lack of friendliness on the part of Mr. Ballinger toward the cause of conservation. The president also declared that Mr. Pinchot's statement had not shaken his confidence in the good faith of Secretary Ballinger and his hearty interest in seeking places of safety.

Wives and families of miners who had responded to appeals from Mace were unable to move, and these may have been buried in the snow.

"Clayton had been dismissed on the ground that his charges against Mr. Ballinger were baseless," he said, "when we now know they were far from baseless."

The witness proceeded to describe his thoughts following these events and, it became evident that he was leading up to the circumstances of the writing of the letter to Senator Dolliver, after which President Taft demanded Mr. Pinchot's resignation.

"I have a letter from Secretary Wilson saying he desires to be present when any testimony is given as to the Dolliver letter," said Chairman Nelson.

A message was sent requesting the immediate presence of Mr. Wilson.

Mr. Pinchot then read into evidence his letter to Senator Dolliver.

Mr. Pinchot was asked to explain his statement in the letter that President Taft had been misled. He declared that evidence before the committee showed Mr. Ballinger knew more about the Cunningham claims than any other man in the service and proceeded to recite the various facts that have come out at the hearing.

Mr. Pinchot declared he thought the president had been misled because in his letter of September 13 dismissing the Clavilas charges he made no reference to Mr. Ballinger's action in clearing the Cunningham claims.

News of the disaster was brought to Everett by two passengers who made their way over the snowbanks by the use of snowshoes and according to these passengers, the crew was asked to run the train into the tunnel to avoid the danger of snowslides, but the request was met with refusal.

TRAMP GETS BIG REWARD

Saves Rancher's Daughter from Being Run Down by Train—is Wealthy Now.

Galveston, Tex.—The filing of documents for record transferring a half interest in the big Valverado ranch, in Jeff Davis county, from Sam Jennings, the cattle king, to Francis Stromie brings to light an interesting incident in which Stromie, who is a stranger in this section, was the son of Little May Jennings, the six-year-old daughter of Col. Jennings, was the heroine. She was saved from death beneath an engine, and Stromie is the man who rescued the child from the railroad tracks. As a reward for his bravery he is given a half interest in a property said to be worth anything from $700,000 to $1,000,000.

Stromie is about 50 years old, a neophyte by trade, and for many years a resident of a small town in Illinois. He met with reverses and, after the death of his wife, took to drink and had been leading a shiftless life for several years. He was beating his way westward trying to make California, and was hanging around Alpharetta trying to catch a train when the incident happened that brought him fortune.

TWO IDAHO TOWNS ARE CRUSHED BY SNOWSLIDES.

MACE AND BURKE BURIED UNDER TONS OF SNOW—PEOPLE CAUGHT WHILE SLEEPING.

Spokane, Wash.—Two mining towns—Mace and Burke—in the Coeur d'Alene district of northern Idaho were wiped out Sunday night by two great avalanches of snow and over two score of lives were lost.

A snowslide swept down the mountain, striking the little town of Mace and burying 25 houses and their sleeping occupants in a mass of snow and ice at the bottom of the canyon.

A few hours later another slide rushed down on the town of Burke, crushing a score of houses under thousands of tons of earth and snow.

Fourteen bodies have been recovered from the ruins of Mace; 15 dead have been found at Burke. How many remain buried can only be guessed at.

SYNOPSIS.

A man's disappearance and re-appearance, the secret of a marriage, and the secret of a woman's life, all intertwined in a plot like no other. She planned a perfect marriage, but it was not made, instead she became Mrs. Halsey in a secret marriage, and out, because of her secret, she was found shot dead in the hall. Her secret, however, was telling others about her life. Mrs. Jones found that she never left the house, and Detective Landes and the coroner started to look for her. They found her in the library, with a man, and he was identified as Jack Bailey, who had talked in the board room, and now married her to the mother of his friend, John Ray. John Ray had been captured, and he was taken to the police station, where he was being held incommunicado. He implored an attorney to get him out of the room. The attorney said he could do nothing, but he did say that the attorney was held up, a woman, who had been suspected of being the mother of the man, and he was released. John Ray, however, had been captured, and he was taken to the police station, where he was being held incommunicado. He had to be bailed out, and he was given a bond, and he was released.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

They stared at each other across the big library table, with young eyes all at once half amazement. And then Gertrude held out both hands to him appealingly.

"We must not," she said suddenly.

"Just now, with so much at stake, it is shameful. I know you are as big now as I am. Make me believe it, Halsey."

Halsey smoothed her hair as he could, and the breath seemed headed. But long after I went to bed he sat down stairs in the living room alone, and I knew he was going over the case as he had learned it. Some things were clear to him that were dark to me. He knew, and Gertrude, too, why Jack Bailey and he had gone away that night, as they did. He knew where they had been for the last 48 hours, and why Jack Bailey had not returned with them. It seemed to me that without full confidence from both the children—they are always children to me—I should never be able to learn anything.

As I was finally getting ready for bed, Halsey came upstairs and knocked at my door. When I had got into a negligee, I used to say wrapper before Gertrude came back from school—I let him in. He stood in the door way a moment, and then he went into agonies of silent mirth. I sat down on the side of the bed and waited in severe silence for him to stop, but he only seemed to grow worse. When he had recovered he took me by the elbow and pulled me in front of the mirror.

"How to be beautiful!" he quoted. "Advice to maid and matrons, by Gertrude Fairfax?" And then I saw myself. I had neglected to remove my wrinkle eradicators, and I presume my appearance was old. I believe that it is a woman's duty to care for her looks, but it is much like telling a necessary falsehood; one must not be found out. By the time I got there, Halsey was serious again, and I listened to his story.

"Aunt Ray," he began, extinguishing his cigarette on the back of my ivory hairbrush, "I would give a lot to tell you the whole thing. But I can't, for a day or so anyhow. But one thing I might have told you a long time ago. If you had known it, you would not have suspected me for a moment of having anything to do with the attack on Arnold Armstrong. Goodness knows what I might do to her looks, but it is much like telling a necessary falsehood; one must not be found out. By the time I got there, Halsey was serious again, and I listened to his story.

By the time I got there, Halsey was serious again, and I listened to his story.

"But the whole thing is absurd," I argued. "And besides, Gertrude's sworn statement that you left before Arnold Armstrong came would clear you at once."

Halsey got up and began to pace the room, and the air of cheerfulness dropped like a mask.

"She can't swear it," he said firmly. "Gertrude's story was true as far as it went, but she didn't tell everything. Arnold Armstrong came here at 2:30—came into the billiard room and left in five minutes. He came to pay their last respects to the dead man, but for some reason they did not care to go.

Halsey spent part of the day with Mr. Johnson, but he said nothing of what happened. He looked grave and anxious, and he had a long conversation with Gertrude late in the afternoon.

That evening found us quiet, with the quiet that precedes an explosion. Gertrude and Halsey were both gloomy and distraught, and as Liddy had already discovered that some of the chin was broken—it is impossible to have any secrets from an old servant—I was not in a pleasant humor myself. Warner brought up the afternoon mail and the evening papers at seven—I was curious to know what the papers said of the murder. We had turned away at least a dozen reporters. But I read over the head-line that ran half-way across the top of the Gazette twice before I comprehended it. Halsey had opened the Chronicle and was staring at it fixedly.

"The Traders' bank closes its doors!" was what I read, and then I put down the paper and looked across the table.

"Did you know of this?" I asked Halsey.

"I expected it. But not so soon," he replied.

"And you?" to Gertrude.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Black River Falls.—Black River Falls, which won distinction by having sold more anti-tuberculosis stamps per capita than any other city, is also gaining distinction for being the only city of its size to serve hot lunches to indigent school children. The work was undertaken and carried on for two months by about twenty-five women who constitute a literary organization known as the "Club" club and whose special work for many years has been of a charitable character. The proceeds of the charity ball this year were devoted to this end.

Milwaukee.—The water levels in rivers in this vicinity are lower than they have been for years and people are objecting strenuously to the high service at Oconto and Peshtigo river. The pulp mills at Crivitz are hampered by low water on this stream. The Menomonee river is lower than usual, but not so low that it is seriously hampering operations of mills along the stream. Wells in Marinette have never gone dry previously now refuse to give up water.

Oshkosh.—That a game warden has no right to confisicate property when used for illegal purposes by another man without the knowledge and consent of the owner of the property, was in effect the opinion of a jury that gave a verdict in favor of August Fries, who brought a replevin suit against C. W. Johnson, former deputy game warden, and Deputy Game Warden C. E. Fullert to recover a gasoline launch confiscated by the defendant as game warden.

Ashland.—Judge Parish has signed an order directing Rev. August Lutz to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court for violation of the injunction signed by Court Commissioner Garvin some weeks ago. The court also orders Mr. Lutz not to interfere with the church in any way in the meantime. Presiding Elder Droeckamp is behind this movement.

Hustisford.—While melting honey in a pull which she forgot to take the cover off, Mrs. E. J. Behn was scalded by the explosion of its contents. She tried to raise the cover a little, when suddenly it flew off, throwing a large amount of the heated contents into her face. One of her eyes is severely injured but it is thought possible to save its sight.

Janesville.—Paul Jensen, aged 24, switchman on the Milwaukee road, fell from the top of a car and his neck was broken and he was badly crushed, death occurring instantly. Jensen had been employed by the company but a few days.

Madison.—State Bank Commissioner M. C. Berg issued a charter authorizing the Germantown State bank of Germantown, Washington county, capital $10,000, to do business. Ulrich Ulrich is president and Ph. G. Dueerwachter cashier.

Milwaukee.—While on her way to attend an anniversary service for the death of her husband, Mrs. Lucy Murk, aged 33 years, was struck by a Milwaukee road train, sustaining injuries from which she died an hour later.

Madison.—Commissioner of Banking M. C. Berg has issued a charter authorizing the Farmers and Merchants' bank of Kilbourn. The capital is $20,000. R. D. Barney is president and A. C. Pennington cashier.

Washburn.—A campaign against leprosy is to be made in this city in the spring. Petitions are being circulated for the necessary signatures asking that the question be submitted to a vote of the people.

"I know that we have all lost a great deal of money," I said. "What innocent man would run away from home at three o'clock in the morning? Doesn't it look rather as though he thought it impossible to escape?"

Gertrude rose angrily. "You are not even just!" she flamed. "You don't know anything about it, and you don't deserve him!"

"Then why did he leave at all?" I asked, unconvinced. "What innocent man would run away from home at three o'clock in the morning?"

"It was the only thing to do," I said. "I had to help him, but it was the wrong way. He came back, and he was told to return the following morning, when everything would be made all right."

Halsey was looking steadily through the window of the breakfast room, but it was evident he saw nothing.
